DERMAWEB Code of Ethics

DERMAWEB is a scientific and medical website created for health professionals, by health professionals. Pierre Fabre Laboratories, editor of www.dermaweb.com, hereinafter referred to as DERMAWEB, undertakes to provide its members with content that complies with the highest scientific and medical standards. They request that authors and external contributors adhere to these same commitments as outlined in the DERMAWEB code of ethics, which is encompassed by that of Pierre Fabre Group as a whole. First and foremost, these commitments are designed to ensure patient safety. The aim of this document is to formalize the roles and responsibilities of the authors/experts called upon for scientific and medical contributions to the DERMAWEB site.

These contributions are scientific and medical and serve a strictly non-promotional purpose.

The authors agree to provide an honest, fair, and balanced description of the various treatment options available to clinicians.

Where applicable, authors are required to point out if there is a Risk Management Plan (RMP) in place for a given drug in their country of practice. This does not exempt the potential prescriber of said drug from verifying the existence of a similar plan in their own country of practice.

1. SCIENTIFIC / MEDICAL CONTENT

The contributing authors/experts, who are selected on the basis of their experience and expertise in fields for which Pierre Fabre wishes to draw on sound medical and scientific judgment, are independent and present their views in a professional and personal capacity. They guarantee the content's objectivity and compliance with the highest scientific/medical, ethical and deontological standards.

Their opinions and recommendations are given by way of information only and cannot in any way replace those of the health authorities.

Under no circumstances are the companies whose drugs have been quoted by the author, either directly or indirectly, responsible for the information published on the site.

2. PUBLICATION OF CONTENT

The Editorial Committee and the Editor-in-Chief reserve the right, in conjunction with the author:

- Not to publish, or to remove from the site, any content that fails to follow good ethical and compliance practices.
- To remove any content that has become obsolete or unhelpful.

For each publication, the authors' memberships in any institutions, learned societies and other organizations are indicated on the site. This membership in no way constitutes an endorsement on the part of said organizations of the contributions submitted by the authors.

3. COPYRIGHTS

The authors undertake to respect all legal obligations relating to copyrights. They are responsible for obtaining permission for any reproductions of third-party copyrighted material and confirm that, to the best of their knowledge, third-party copyrights are duly respected.

4. INTERACTIONS, CONTRIBUTIONS AND COMMENTS

DERMAWEB strives to provide reliable and up-to-date content. However, it does not offer any explicit or implicit guarantee as to the compliance and exhaustiveness of the information and content available on the site.

The use made of the information and content remains under the sole responsibility and control of said health professionals.

DERMAWEB declines all responsibility for the outcome of any decisions made by health professionals using the site that are based purely on the information published on it.

The reader is reminded that the content of this site should not be treated as a substitute for the information available in scientific publications. The content should therefore be considered as a non exhaustive addition to the scientific information available in the therapeutic field of the diseases in question.

Some of the data published on this site may not have been validated by the health authorities in the user's country. The user must refer to the relevant local authorities for any further information.

For communications that are moderated after publication, DERMAWEB declines all responsibility for any contribution submitted by health professionals within the site's collaborative spaces if the Editorial
Committee had no prior knowledge of said contribution before it was put online, or if it was promptly removed as soon as the committee became aware of it.

The answers and comments posted in the "Skindiag" service's discussion thread are for informational purposes only and are in no way under the responsibility of Pierre Fabre Laboratories. These are exchanges between health professionals in which Pierre Fabre does not intervene. However, Pierre Fabre reserves the right to moderate the ″Skindiag″ service’s discussion thread in order to uphold the ethical and deontological standards of its exchanges and publications.

5. PATIENT DATA

The data exchanged in the ″Skindiag″ service’s discussion thread is neither stored nor analyzed. It is the responsibility of users to receive prior consent from their patients to post photos online and to ensure that their anonymity is respected.

Code of Ethics - Dermaweb - March 2022